

Health and Traceability

The lambs were born on Worth Abbey Farm in March/April 2021. The flock is “closed” which means we do not buy in from other farms. Only 1 or 2 Rams (males) are brought into the flock each year from selected farms. This helps maintain the high health status of the flock and prevents introduced diseases and infection. We retain 30 female lambs each year to replace the ewes who become too old to breed. Therefore the females are born on Worth Abbey Farm and spend their entire life grazing the fields here. All lambs have their own unique ID. I could show you both its mother and father, indeed often its grandmother and so on. The Abattoir and Butcher are in Henfield - a distance of just 16 miles.

Welfare

The health of the flock is the primary priority. There is a Veterinary approved flock preventive health plan in place, which ensures the ewes are vaccinated as necessary, regularly condition scored, and checked daily. The sheep are allowed to stay outside all year.

Environment

Maintaining a flock of sheep on the grassland fields contributes significantly to providing favourable habitat for a range of ground nesting birds, small mammals and pollinating insects. The selective grazing habits and low impact of sheep on the soil surface maintains a mosaic of species rich grassland which allows nectar rich wild flowers to flourish. The flock compliments a Countryside Stewardship prescription for the grassland. This requires the land to be managed with very low inputs and lenient grazing practiced. The grass is allowed to grow to seed which provides food for woodland birds. The longer grass dies back over Winter and degrades into soil organic matter. Increasing soil organic matter content is an efficient way of sequestering (storing) carbon, which helps in the aim of slowing down climate change.

What is Hogget lamb?

Superb roasted, slow cooked, pan-fried or grilled, hogget is as versatile as it is flavourful. But what exactly is hogget? And why does it taste so good?

A year grazing grass

Hogget is the word used to describe a lamb approaching its second spring - so aged around one year. While still tender, a hogget’s extra six months slow lean growth from grazing pasture allows it to develop a flavour that is richer and fuller than younger fast grown lamb, but not as pronounced as mutton. It is this satisfying depth of flavor and texture which make hogget lamb special.
